

Child Support

Miami Child Support Attorney

Florida courts use statutory guidelines to determine how much child support you are entitled to receive or obligated to pay. Those guidelines will take into account the income of each parent and the number of children. A child support order will include a requirement to pay for the child's health care coverage.

I am Theodore H. Enfield, a family law attorney in Miami with more than 30 years of experience in guiding couples through issues such as separation, divorce and child custody. Contact me to discuss your concerns during a free telephone consultation.

Child Support Considerations

Though the guidelines courts use are fairly uncomplicated and straightforward, there is one area where they lack. No guideline ever takes into account the unique needs and considerations of each family. This is where I can help. With a solid foundation of experience, knowledge and understanding, I can work on your behalf to negotiate deviations from the guidelines to account for:

- Large income disparity of parents
- Special needs of children
- Unique visitation arrangements

Using the appropriate tools, such as a child support calculator, I can help you determine how much custodial parents will likely receive to cover the child's living expenses for:

- Daycare
- Healthcare
- Education

Should modifications need to be made, I can the parents discuss the changes and I can present before the court. If the support payments are in arrears, I can petition the court for enforcement of the orders.

Free Consultation with a Florida Lawyer

If you have questions pertaining to separation, divorce or family law, contact the Miami law firm of Theodore Enfield. For a free consultation by telephone, call 305-933-9592 or 1-800-733-5299 or fill out the contact form on this Web site.